Galloway—Brown. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
ALEIGH, N. C., October 31.—A wedding of special social interest here was this morning at Christ Episcopal Church, the marriage of Margaret Lane Turk, daughter of the late W. A. Turk, of Southern Railway, Washington, and John Galloway, of Mount Airy, N. C. The decorations were very beautiful in green and white and the bridesmaids wore very handsomely trimmed in white. Miss Kinney, the maid of honor, was Miss Ellen Galloway, of Mount Airy. A reception followed the ceremony at the bride's home on ch was bridesmaid. The groomsmen ushers, were Messrs. Graham An-ys, William Little, Sam Hinsdale, Dr. Whitaker, and Fab Briggs. The

The party was preceded down the aisle by a bevy of fifteen special girl friends of the bride. These were seated in front during the ceremony. The wedding service was by Dr. M. Marshall, the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Dortch left on the 11:30 A. L. train for a tour of the northern cities. The groom is one of the conformation and field manners w clean bred pack of Mr. Higginson's.

How well he has succeeded in fulfilling this aim has to be seen

The recent trials in Barre, Massachusetts, which, owing to the physical conditions of the country, is the most favorable test a fox-hound can have, were a test of the breed of eleven out of fifteen prizes offered by the Brunswick Fox Hound Club for speed, nose, game, hunting and tail. The best of the fox-hounds in some of the best high-class fox-hounds in America.

In addition to field winning, Mr. Smith has taken the very best of the fox-hounds have been appreciated, but it is safe to say that his pack is they stand out from the rest of the breed. The owners, that no M. F. H. has ever exhibited such a high standard of fox-hounds or hounds that come near the American sportsman's ideal of perfection. The eleven best of the fox-hounds and last of the fox-hounds that Smith will hunt in Piedmont.

In contrast the lines and racing and the pack of Mr. Henry A. Hise tion, proving that it is possible for American fox-hound to combine with English quality, appearance, and speed. By the way, the Graton pack is qualified to become the standard. Middlesex the Graton hounds enjoy the reputation of being the first recognized pack of fox-hounds to fully kill a wild fox in the New England open, and this is the only country where the fox to earth has been unprecedented speed and driving, and indeed it is opinion of many sportsmen who have been to the Graton pack that no other foxhounds hunted in the North ever show the class that the Graton hounds exhibited during the past seasons.

On the M. F. H. of the Graton pack appearing in this country where there was impossible to ride to hounds the success of his defeating the Middlesex will attract attention, not only by the stance expressed in bone and muscle, but by the character of the hind legs, backs, and sterns and masculine appearance.

The color of the Middlesex hounds is black, but the Graton hounds there is a stronger family resemblance evidence. They represent the best in England, and thirty-four couples of the Graton hounds are the best of better huntsman lives to-day, with typical English pack hunted by a English huntsman.

On his fifth birthday some were called to the pleasure of the Middlesex hounds kill a red fox in Middlesex meadows, and inspired chase he jumped his favorite hunter a plume fence, when he found that his riding nerve is still with him.

As a notable sportsman remark the Middlesex hounds do not show to would have been quadrupled, for absolutely necessary that the English hound should be handled by the huntsman whenever the pack comes to a check in the cast for the line before they are sent to the fox. In the Middlesex hounds the best when left alone to circle and for themselves.

Moreover, Mr. Harry W. Smith has been almost invariably drabbing to a light form and color-for had he light conformation it would have been possible for him to have been a fox-hunter in the South, where the fox-hucks in the South united the highest degree of fox hunting with speed and endurance.

It is not, however, a question of how well such a pack could have been handled, but when we consider that America boasts of individual hounds capable of the redoubtable and the killing of the fox is to be the best of the hounds in the Smith's pack, it is not surprising that such individual foxes, with which such individual foxes, when hunted collectively, they are not so well as they can run with harmony.

Insure the best of mind manners and enough harmonize in pack before they can be used against the fox.

When the Indians visit Georgetown on Thanksgiving Day they will have a new tricks to show. All kinds of formations are being used by the Indians, and they go through practice with great speed and confidence.
